“ Pat and I became close after high school. He was living with his sister Pam and her partner in San Francisco, and I was a college student in Palo Alto. On weekends I would hitchhike up to "crash"-- haven't used that word in a long time!-- on their couch and Pat and I would take walks in Golden Gate Park, listen to music and go to the movies. So many memories! I can still hear his crazy loud laugh and see his twinkling eyes-- and of course, the very animated pretend self punch to his nose. I know people reading this will know what I mean! I miss you Pat...

“ Dear Pat, I find myself filled with gratitude as I reflect on the warmth and boundless hospitality you extended to me. Your kind and gentle nature never wavered, even in the midst of the rambunctious children who sought the comfort of your family's embrace. The memories of our time together bring a smile to my face, especially those moments when we would gather to watch 'The Simpsons,' finding solace in its light-hearted humor. Your infectious laughter and unique sense of humor were truly one of a kind. As I bid you farewell, know that you will be deeply missed, and your absence leaves a void that cannot be easily filled. Your presence illuminated our lives, and your memory will continue to brighten our days. With heartfelt appreciation, Antwan Jones

“ Pat played bass guitar in a rock band I was in back in 1967-8. He had a great sense of humor. In those days, everyone called him Goober. I'm not sure how that got started, but I don't remember ever calling him Pat. I last saw him about 2 years ago and still couldn't get used to calling him Pat! He was fine with that; never said a word about it. A great guy, who will be missed by many people. ❤️

“ I dated Pat in 1970. We were really more like great friends, not really such a big romance. He was immensely kind and funny and if it weren't for him I would probably not have gone to college! He helped me find the grants and aid I needed to go to UWM. Funny I guess Financial Aid kind of runs in the Richard family! He was a wonderful person!
